WEST LINN-WILSONVILLE
SCHOOL DISTRICT

PRESS RELEASE

West Linn-Wilsonville School District Announces Boundary Task Force Community Meetings

West Linn/Wilsonville, November 9, 2011: As the West Linn-Wilsonville School District moves forward in the construction and planning to open our new schools (Lowrie Primary School in Wilsonville and Trillium Creek Primary School in West Linn) we would like to thank community members who have stepped forward to support us in our processes and planning. The opening of our new schools in the fall of 2012 will naturally require a reconfiguring of our current school attendance boundaries. A team of school district and community representatives have begun initial planning for this process and we would like to announce the dates, sites, and times for community meetings designed to gather input and generate questions from our schools and families related to possible changes associated with the opening of these new schools. The West Linn-Wilsonville Boundary Task Force will use information gathered at these meetings to guide their eventual preparation of recommendations to present to the School Board in March/April. The district will also hold an additional round of community meetings in late January or early February with locations and times TBA. The task force is made up of parents from each primary and middle school along with principals, teachers, a Board liaison, and other district staff.

While adjusting boundaries can be challenging, we look forward to the opportunity for thoughtful planning, communication, and to the excitement and possibility that the opening of new schools brings to our communities.
