TUTORING FOR PAY

The West Linn-Wilsonville School District provides instructional services for all students in the basic areas of mathematics and communication skills. Recognizing, however, that some children require more special or individual attention than others, special education teachers have been assigned to each elementary, intermediate, and senior high school to assist eligible students with special needs and to act as a resource teacher to the classroom teachers who work with the students with learning disabilities. In some cases, community volunteers may be recruited and trained by the learning disability teacher to provide special assistance.

The district is aware that some parents wish to provide additional help beyond that which the district is providing in answering the special needs of individual students. This help may take the form of a private tutor hired by the parents.

Private tutors will not be allowed to provide their services to students in the school buildings during the time school is in session. Such activities shall take place before or after the regular school day. The principal may, at his/her discretion, excuse a student during the school day to work with a private tutor off school property.

The assistant superintendent will keep a list of tutors who have applied to the district as being in private practice. This list will be kept on file and will be available to any parent who so requests. The district will provide parents, who so request, a current assessment of the level of functioning of their child. District employees will not make any recommendations to parents concerning the competencies of individual tutors. The district will not be held responsible for the competency of the individual so employed, since the parent shall be the sole determinant as to the need and use of the tutorial service.
