Admission Testing Policies

- Test-Optional: refers to colleges that give students the choice to submit standardized testing scores if they feel it reflects their true ability. Colleges will consider scores if submitted, but there will not be a penalty for choosing not to submit scores.
- Test-Blind: refers to colleges that will not consider standardized testing scores for any applicant, even if submitted.

Admission Testing Policies for Fall 2021

- Oregon State University/University of Oregon/University of Washington
 - Test Optional for Fall 2021 and beyond
- Western Oregon University and Portland State University
 - Test Optional, if student has a 3.0 GPA or above
- Linfield, University of Portland, Willamette University, and BYU
 - Test Optional
- Reed College
 - Two-Year Test Blind Policy
- University of California
 - Test Blind
- Most highly selective schools
 - One-Year Test Optional Policy for 2020-2021

The Importance of Testing? It Depends...

- Lower Priority:
 - The largest set of colleges, about 80% of 4-year colleges. Admission decisions do not hinge on test scores. They mainly look at GPA and course rigor.
- Plus Factor:
 - This set of colleges, about 20% of 4-year colleges, are still selective, so strong test scores can be a plus factor, but not a singular difference maker.
- Still Important:
 - These highly selective colleges have less than 10% acceptance rates. Only about 1% of 4-year colleges. It is still advisable to take the SAT/ACT.
