Letter from the Principal

Dear Families,

Middle school students are amazing! They are curious, creative, talented, passionate—truly delightful young men and women. I am so fortunate to have the opportunity to see them learn and grow daily, and I am proud to be their principal.

Many of you experience the joys of working with our middle schoolers as you volunteer in our school. Being a volunteer provides you a window into their world—you see their energy at lunch, their curiosity in the classroom, and the excitement they show when they learn new material. And as parents, you have numerous opportunities to have fun with them, support them with homework, attend their extra-curricular activities, and help them learn to navigate the emotional ups-and-downs of adolescence.

So, although we all have a variety of chances to see these wonderful middle schoolers "in action", we still may not be aware of some of the unique, exceptional learning activities our students, or their friends, are engaged in at school. I would like to take this opportunity then, to highlight just a few.

We have a Rosemont Ridge Lego Robotics Team, made up of six sixth grade students and coached by one of our parents. This team of robotics engineers participated in a Regional Competition in December, earned the Ace Award, presented their project to Mayor Kovash and the city council, and then participated in the State Lego Robotics Tournament on January 15th. We are extremely proud of these young students, their commitment, and creativity.

Our eighth grade science extensions course engages students in the inquiry process with particular attention paid to developing viable experiments. This semester-long course has been a rigorous & challenging one with many of the students delving into unique areas of study. We are proud to announce that one of our students will be entering his project into the Northwest Science Expo at Portland State in March!

Letter from the Principal Continued

OBOB is another exciting activity some of our Rosemont students are involved in. This is the first year our school has participated in OBOB—Oregon Battle of the Books. We have a healthy crop of ten teams of four students each who are competing to show their chops as ace readers. Each team collectively read the "Sweet 16", that is, a set of sixteen books chosen by the Oregon Association of School Libraries to represent a broad range of interests and encourage students to work together to learn and have fun with literature. Our parent volunteer, Charlene Houriet-Walsh, has been working alongside our teacher librarian/IC, Shelly Buchanan, our library assistant, Karen Bonoff, and one of our language arts teachers, Gillian Stratton, to organize the competition. The winner(s) of this competition will advance to the regional competition and then possibly go on to state. The students are enthusiastic, the questioning rounds are informative and entertaining, and we look forward to participating in this OBOB activity again next year.

Another program I would like to highlight is taking place in one of our social studies extension classes. The students were investigating the Oregon Encyclopedia project—a partnership of Portland State University, the Oregon Council of Teachers of English, and the Oregon Historical Society. This partnership is creating an online-encyclopedia dedicated to Oregon's history and culture. Our seventh graders noticed there was not an entry regarding West Linn so they decided to research and write one themselves. This garnered the attention of Dr. Hardt, one of the editors from Portland State, who came to our school and worked with our students on their first-draft. The class will be submitting their final entry soon and hope it will be accepted and placed in this online encyclopedia.

And finally, as I have stated many times, our music and arts programs are stellar! Today our 7th grade band performed for our entire student body and this evening our choirs are performing for our community. Recently our arts department was informed that several of our students, and one of our classes, had earned prestigious awards for their individual pieces. An eighth grade, first semester class, was the only middle school to have a piece accepted into the Artist Statement Show in Portland. Their piece, entitled, "Never Too Thin" is now in our school on display. Five students had their work submitted to the Scholastic Art Awards and four were recognized—two students earned the Gold Key award, one student earned a Silver Key award, and one student earned an Honorable Mention. Additionally, two students had their work exhibited in a downtown gallery—The People's Art of Portland Gallery. We are so proud of our music and arts programs and the students who participate!

Middle school is a wonderful time of student growth and learning. It is also a time for discovering some of their interests, gifts, and talents. Our students, parents and staff at Rosemont Ridge are accomplishing great things together, and we look forward to seeing just what these creative young people will continue to do!

See you next month,
Debi
