SRO OVERVIEW

Wilsonville Schools are a part of the West Linn - Wilsonville School District, and supported by the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office and Wilsonville Police.

The City of Wilsonville contracts with the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office for law enforcement services, and funds one School Resource Officer (SRO). That SRO responds to nine schools in the Wilsonville area. The Oregon Department of Education reported there were 5,093 students enrolled in Wilsonville schools during the 2018-2019 school year. Statistics for the 2019-2020 school year had not been published as of October 2020.

Many agencies support SRO positions. Those SROs work with one another as need arises. We have found the student population is varied and mobile.

The scope of an SRO's function is wide-ranging. They foster relationships with students and school staff, build rapport, and bridge the gap between schools and police. SROs routinely act as a resource for students, teachers, parents, and the community. They are often asked to speak to elementary, middle school, and high school students during class and provide information on a variety of subjects, such as school bullying, online safety and social media, personal safety, and government and law enforcement.

Because the SRO fosters relationships with students, they become someone a student may look up to and trust. Students often find themselves reporting things to the SRO that are difficult for them to talk about with other adults, such as safety concerns, physical abuse, or sexual assault.

The SRO's training and experience routinely becomes a resource for schools forming plans for response to critical incidents or implementing safety plans for students.

Outside the school itself, the SRO attends ongoing training to maintain skill sets and learn about best practices, as well as works with other professionals who respond to the welfare and safety needs of children. These agencies are business such as Department of Human Services (DHS), Child Abuse Response and Evaluation Services Northwest (CARES NW), Clackamas County Juvenile, and the Children's Center.

SRO COSTS

Since its inception, the School District and City have shared the SRO Program costs, with the City funding additional training.

The SRO serves as road patrol for the City when school is not in session--during the summer months, over holidays, or due to other events that shut down schools.

Below is an estimation of involved costs and how they are distributed between the school district and the City of Wilsonville. These figures are based on the 2019-2020 school year.

RECRUITMENT

SROs are certified deputies with the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office who apply for the position and go through a selection process on a three-year rotation. Two one-year additions may be made if the school district and City are satisfied with results.

The City of Wilsonville contracts with the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office for police services. One of the many benefits of this relationship is that SRO applicants come from a much larger pool of deputies, compared to a smaller police department with limited staff.

The selection process for the SRO position begins with a letter of interest from the applicant. The letter must include an endorsement from a current supervisor (sergeant). Once received, a review of past annual evaluations is completed. Former and current supervisors are contacted for input.

Finally, an interview is held. The interview panel includes one or two members of the West Linn-Wilsonville School District, a representative from the Wilsonville City Manager's office, and the Chief of Police. Collectively, a decision gets made on the best fit for the position.

TRAINING

Once a deputy is selected, they attend a Basic SRO Course taught by instructors from the National Association of School Resource Officers (NASRO). The Wilsonville Police Department strives to have the SRO candidate attend this course prior to the start of the school year. We also make efforts to have the previous SRO spend a week with the new candidate to help create new relationships with staff, and become familiar with all the WLWV facilities and security concerns.

Wilsonville Police also looks for specialized training opportunities offered throughout the year. Examples include: Online Bullying Investigation, Advanced Sex Assault Investigative Techniques, and Facility Threat Assessment.

Our SROs work closely with detectives on abuse and sex assault cases involving children in the school district, and learn advanced investigative techniques, search warrant writing, and evidence collection.

NASRO

NASRO is a not-for-profit organization and recognized as a world leader in school-based policing. NASRO developed the “triad” concept of school-based policing. It divides the SRO responsibilities into three areas: teacher, informal counselor, and law enforcement officer. Wilsonville officers implement this triad daily during the performance of their duties.

NASRO Basic SRO Course

The NASRO Basic School Resource Officer Course is a 40-hour block of instruction designed for law enforcement officers and school safety professionals working in an educational environment and with school administrators. The course provides tools that help officers build positive relationships with students and staff. The course is also beneficial for educational professionals dedicated to providing a safe learning environment, and provides a more in-depth understanding of the role and functions of an SRO.

OSROA

Training continues with other opportunities, such as the Oregon School Resource Officers Association (OSROA). Annual conference trainings include active threat response protocols, state and national issues, de-escalation, cyber investigation, and case reviews.

CIT

All Clackamas County Sheriff/Wilsonville Police are required to attend 40 hours of Crisis Intervention Training (CIT). This course was developed with the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI). The goal of this course is to provide our first responders with tools for interaction with persons who are suffering an emotional disturbance.

2019-2020

The Wilsonville SRO becomes involved with the school district in multiple ways, actively promoting safety and providing resources. During the 2019-2020 school year, our SRO contributed in the following manner:

- Suicide Prevention—Participated in QPR (Question, Persuade, Refer) training and offered resources to parents concerned about suicide
- Inclusion—Worked with families of LGBTQ (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer) students to foster inclusion and safety for students
- Education—Developed and presented training to staff on Human Trafficking, current drug trends, and symptoms of drug use
- School Security Assessment—Reviewed the physical safety of each school in the district and identified areas of strength and weakness, provided suggestions for improvement
- Attended multiple federal-level threat assessment trainings that focused on threat identification and intervention tactics, prior to an event becoming critical, as well as large event safety considerations

2019-2020 Data

- Three arrests at school (warrant, arson, robbery)
- Three sexual assault investigations
- 10 Sex or physical abuse cases involving parents
- Five welfare checks resulting in criminal police reports for DHS
